April 2014 Orders Comments

Trailing three-month order trends remained strong, as global capital investment reflected favorable momentum overall despite persisting uncertainty in some markets. Growth continued across all segments, with Process Management strongest. Excluding currency translation, which added 1 percentage point, underlying orders increased 8 percent, consistent with preliminary estimates. Following upper-teens growth in the month of March driven by large, multi-year industrial projects, April order rates moderated as expected, also reflecting a shift in booking days to March from April versus the prior year.

Process Management orders growth continued to exhibit high levels of investment in energy and chemical industries, led by unconventional oil and gas projects in North America. Demand in Europe and Asia was also strong. Latin America reflected slower market conditions and Middle East/Africa was weak. Currency translation added 3 percentage points, primarily due to backlog revaluation.

Industrial Automation orders grew moderately, as gradual recovery of global capital goods markets continued. Growth was led by a double-digit increase in power generating alternators, with the fluid automation and materials joining businesses also strong. Currency translation added 1 percentage point.

Network Power orders strength continued to be driven by data center project activity in Europe and global telecommunications infrastructure investments. The North America and Asia data center businesses grew modestly, led by strong demand for services. Latin America was weak. Currency translation deducted 1 percentage point.

Climate Technologies order trends improved, led by strength in the global refrigeration business and in air conditioning markets in Asia. Growth continued in North America, and Europe remained up despite slower market conditions. The solutions and temperature sensors businesses were strong, while temperature controls was down.

Commercial & Residential Solutions orders grew moderately, reflecting continued momentum in international markets and recovery from weather-related sluggishness in the U.S. Growth was strongest in the wet/dry vacuums, residential storage, and food waste disposers businesses.
