October 2009 Order Comments:

The trailing three-month order rate for Emerson was down 10 to 15 percent, with the recent weakening of the U.S. dollar positively impacting orders by 7 percentage points. We have seen sequential improvement in Emerson's trailing three-month underlying orders excluding currency every month since July. Order trends continue to support the sales forecast provided during the November 3, 2009 conference call.

The trailing three-month order rate for Process Management was down 5 to 10 percent. Currency exchange rates positively impacted the order growth rate by approximately 18 percentage points due to the weakening of the U.S. dollar resulting in a significant positive backlog revaluation. Orders in the power and water end markets continued to hold up better than the refining and chemical end markets.

Industrial Automation order trends have shown sequential improvement each month in the trailing three-month period, but still remain at low levels as global capital goods markets remain depressed.

Network Power trailing three-month underlying order trends continued to show signs of stabilization. The China network power business order rates continued to be better than the remaining businesses in this segment.

Strong R-22 orders ahead of the January 1, 2010 R-410A refrigerant change, as well as continued strength in China, drove order rates for Climate Technologies into positive territory.

Appliance and Tools order trends continued to be negatively impacted by low consumer confidence levels and weakness in U.S. residential and non-residential investment.
